2001. Notification; Public Input.

(a) (1) An agency that anticipates promulgating a major regulation shall provide the department, not later than February 1 of each calendar year, with a list and a detailed summary of each major regulation that it anticipates proposing during the current calendar year. The information shall be provided on a form prescribed by the department. The list shall specifically identify by name and subject matter each major regulation that the agency proposes to adopt, amend, or repeal. The summary shall describe in detail the problem intended to be addressed by each proposed major regulation, the estimated economic impact of each proposed major regulation, and the anticipated date on which the agency proposes to publish the notice of proposed action for each major regulation. The list and detailed summary shall also contain the name of the agency and the name, telephone number, email, and mailing address of a contact person.

(2) In the event an agency determines after February 1 that it anticipates promulgating a major regulation, the agency shall submit to the department the information required in subdivision (a) as soon as possible but in no event later than 60 days prior to filing a notice of proposed action with OAL or, if the agency files an emergency regulation with OAL, contemporaneous with the filing of the notice of proposed action to pursuant to Section 11346.1(e) of the code for that emergency regulation.

(b) Within 15 days of receipt of a list and summary of a proposed major regulation, the department shall provide a copy of that list and summary to GO-Biz and to any other agency that has requested a copy.

(c) Within 15 days of receipt of a list and summary of proposed major regulations, the department shall post that list and summary on its Internet web site.

(d) The agency shall also seek public input regarding alternatives from those who would be subject to or affected by the major regulation (including other state agencies and local agencies, where appropriate) prior to filing a notice of proposed action with OAL unless the agency is required to implement federal law and regulations which the agency has little or no discretion to vary. An agency shall document and include in the SRIA the methods by which it sought public input.

(2) Not less than 90 days prior to filing a notice of proposed action with OAL if the agency has not notified the department of the proposed major regulation within the time prescribed by section 2001(a);

(b) (1) The SRIA shall contain all of the information required by Section 11346.3(c) of the code, which shall have been prepared in compliance with section 2003.

(2) The SRIA shall also include a description and explanation of each of the following:

(A) The economic impact method and approach, including the underlying assumptions the agency used and the rationale and basis for those assumptions;

(B) The specific types of business enterprises and individuals who would be affected by the proposed major regulation;

(C) The inputs into the economic impact assessment;

(D) The outputs from the economic impact assessment;

(E) The agency's interpretation of the results.

(3) The SRIA shall also include documentation sufficient to substantiate compliance with the requirements of this section and of sections 2002 and 2003.

(c) The SRIA shall be accompanied by a form prescribed by the department that includes all of the following:

(1) Name of the agency.

(2) The name, telephone number, email and mailing address of the contact person.

(3) Statement of the need for the proposed major regulation.

(4) A summary of the business enterprises and individuals who will be impacted by the proposed major regulation and the amount of the economic impact on each.

(6) Description of the single year or 12-month period in which the agency estimates the economic impact of the proposed major regulation will exceed $50 million.

(7) Description of the baseline that the agency used to compare proposed regulatory alternatives.

2003. Methodology for Making Estimates.

(a) In conducting the SRIA required by Section 11346.3(c) of the code, an agency shall use an economic impact method and approach that has all of the following capabilities:

(1) Can estimate the total economic effects of changes due to regulatory policies over a multi-year time period.

(2) Can generate California economic variable estimates such as personal income, employment by economic sector, exports and imports, and gross state product, based on inter-industry relationships that are equivalent in structure to the Regional Industry Modeling System published by the Bureau of Economic Analysis.

(3) Can produce (to the extent possible) quantitative estimates of economic variables that address or facilitate the quantitative or qualitative estimation of the following:

(A) The creation or elimination of jobs within the state;

(B) The creation of new businesses or the elimination of existing businesses within the state;

(C) The competitive advantages or disadvantages for businesses currently doing business within the state;

(D) The increase or decrease of investment in the state;

(E) The incentives for innovation in products, materials, or processes; and

(F) The benefits of the regulations, including but not limited to benefits to the health, safety, and welfare of California residents, worker safety, and the state's environment and quality of life, among any other benefits identified by the agency.

(b) The department's most current publicly available economic and demographic projections, which may be found on the department's website, shall be used unless the department approves the agency's written request to use a different projection for a specific proposed major regulation. Such approval shall be made on a case-by-case basis. An agency that anticipates that it will take more than one year to develop a major regulation is encouraged to work with the department in determining the most appropriate projections to use.

(c) Costs and benefits shall be separately identified for different groups of agencies, businesses and individuals if the impact of the major regulation will differ significantly between identifiable groups.

(d) The agency shall compare its proposed regulatory alternatives with a baseline that reflects the anticipated behavior of individuals and businesses in the absence of the proposed major regulations and shall identify the baseline it used.

(e) In comparing proposed regulatory alternatives with an established baseline, an agency should consider including the following in its analysis:

(1) A description of feasible alternatives to the proposed alternative and the rationale for choosing the proposed alternative over the others considered. This description should also include:

(A) An explanation of how the requirement for the proposed major regulation affects the selection of regulatory alternatives;

(B) An evaluation of the legal and statutory constraints that limit the selection of regulatory alternatives.

(2) Whenever possible, at least two alternatives should be compared to the proposed alternative, including:

(A) An alternative that could achieve additional benefits beyond those associated with the proposed alternative; and

(B) A next-best alternative that would not yield the same level of benefits associated with the proposed alternatives, or is less likely to yield the same level of benefits.

(3) A comparison of the cost-effectiveness of different alternatives.

(A) Both total and incremental benefits and costs should be estimated.

Incremental benefits and costs are the differences between the estimates associated with the alternatives considered.

(B) Whenever possible, final rather than intermediate outcomes should be used as measures of effectiveness.

(C) In cases where the proposed major regulation addresses more than one measure of effectiveness, weights should be applied to different categories of effects.

(D) The uncertainties associated with the estimates should be discussed.

(4) If there are significant differences between the incidence or timing of costs and benefits of a regulation, distributional effects should be addressed, including how the effects of the regulation are distributed, for example, by industry, income, race, sex, or geography, and how the effects are distributed over time.

(5) The assumptions, analytical methods, and data used in the analysis should be documented.

(A) To the extent possible, the analysis should rely on peer-reviewed literature.

(B) The source for all original information should be documented.

(f) An analysis of estimated changes in behavior by businesses and/or individuals in response to the proposed major regulation shall be conducted and, if feasible, an estimate made of the extent to which costs or benefits are retained within the business or passed on to others, including customers, employees, suppliers and owners.

(g) For each assessment of the value of benefits of the proposed major regulation required by section 11346.3(c) of the code, the agency shall describe the applied analytical methods and data sources used and the results of that analysis.

(1) The agency's assessment may rely on current and (if applicable) projected market transaction data where a market exists that can directly reveal the quantity or monetary value of a projected benefit of the proposed major regulation.

(2) The agency may use an indirect approach (e.g., use values derived from related markets) in cases where the value of the benefits can be inferred from actual choices made by individuals in related markets. The assessment should rely on current and (if applicable) projected market transaction data.

(3) The agency may use a direct approach (e.g. use values from surveys), estimating the value of the benefits based on hypothetical choices made by individuals responding to a survey.

(4) The agency may estimate the value of the benefits based upon an existing study of another regulatory policy with similar subject or physical characteristics. This estimate should describe how the agency took into account the differences in the characteristics (such as time span, specific benefits to value, population, and other socio-economic factors) between the study and the proposed major regulations.

(h) In assessing the effects of a regulatory proposal on the General Fund and special funds of the state and affected local government agencies attributable to the proposed major regulation, including the cost of enforcement and compliance to the agency, an agency should follow the Department of Finance instructions in the State Administrative Manual sections 6601 through 6616.

2004. Failure to Comply with Requirements of this Chapter.

When an agency fails to comply in whole or in part with this chapter, the department shall identify in its comments the area(s) where the agency is out of compliance.
